

Improving life and leadership of assistant principals

Five for Friday Show Notes

Teaser:

When was the last time you took an action, expecting to achieve a specific result, and things did not turn out as you planned? Maybe it was last month, or last week. Or maybe it was yesterday. We all work within systems and systems are incredibly complex. It should be no surprise, that when we make one change to achieve a specific outcome, that one change can ripple through the organization with unintended consequences. The bigger the change, the more likely there will be unintended consequences, with the magnitude of those consequences reflecting the magnitude of the change.

Insert intro

Today's episode of Five for Friday recaps the strategic leadership emails for the week of April 10-14, 2023.

Celebration: I turned 60, so even thought that was Tuesday's email, we will be there. (Dissect 60) mistaking measures for outcomes

Monday:

Inspiration for the week: Godin's parking meters

Thursday: Email

Friday: Reflect on changes, results, and unintended consequences

Takeaway
Incremental change

Question of the week:

Improving life and leadership of assistant principals

That is this week's Five for Friday rendition of The Assistant Principal Podcast.

Thank you for including me on your leadership journey.

I look forward to seeing you again next Tuesday when I ask for your help unpacking an idea I have about how we can support our early career teachers with classroom management in a way that that emphasizes common language, shared supports, and clear expectations.

I'm Frederick Buskey and thank you again for joining me on this episode of the Assistant Principal Podcast. Remember to subscribe so you don't miss a single episode. Cheers!
